JOHN B. CARRINGTON. OWARD T. CABRINGTON. JOHN B. CARRINGTON, JR Wednesday Morning, August 9, 1882. THE FREIGHT HANDLERS' FAILURE. It has been plain for some time that the great strike of freight handlers in New York would fail. It has failed, and for the last two or three days the strikers have been ask-namely, seventeen cents an hour.

So. 400 State Street, Courier Building

The history of this strike is instructive. I began June 15. The men had been receiving seventeen cents an hour, but they deanded twenty cents. This was a reasonable demand, and because it was reasonable, and public trouble, the strikers received much encouragement. Subscriptions were started dealings with Wilson but the large on the Quai d'Orsay. Trompette, the most illustrious cordon bleu of Paris, sucencouragement. Subscriptions were started and contributions poured in rapidly from the son should have told the public all about citizens at large and from the labor unions. During the struggle there have been distributed to the strikers in New York city about $15,000. In this distribution preference was given to the most needy. In case of a death, a birth, severe illness,or a pressing demand for rent, as much as $20 was supplied to one member of the union. The others re ceived from $5 to $10, according to their needs, men with large families being given the preference. Many of the strikers sucseeded in finding employment elsewhere, but the others were obliged to subsist chiefly on what they earned before the strike or else upon credit. No member received more than one installment from the relief fund. In Jersey City about $6,500 have been distribated to the strikers.

The strikers have been out seven weeks. They would have earned in that time had they kept at work about $140,000, or $71 40 each. At the rate demanded the wages for the whole time would have been $84 for each man. Their effort to get an increase has been an unprofitable one. Of course they hoped to enforce compliance with their demands, and if at the end of the seven weeks the rate of twenty cents an hour had been conceded, they would have made up the loss in a little more than a month. But the strike has failed, and to the seven weeks' acrifice must be added that of further and ndefinite idleness for many of the strikers. There has not been a strike lately which had a more promising start than this one The demand of the strikers was apparently ast, they had a multitude of sympathizing r ends, and the railroad companies had for a time all the trouble that the strikers could want them to have. But the companies were heir half trained or untrained men until hey conquered. The only excuse they have riven for not granting the advance asked for is that the demand hould have given them time to consider the ituation. This is better than no excuse, but loes not help the strikers, who now see that hey have made a mistake and have added to he great quantity of evidence that a strike is a very poor way of adjusting differences between workingmen and employers. Where ne strike is successful ten fail, even if, like this one, they seem to be founded on justice

Moreover, with the swimming plates, a man can carry a weight of fifty pounds around his neck. Much is said about fast swimming, but the result of my experience is that, roughly speaking, one and a half yards a second is the ne blus ultra of swimmers. Great swimmers have to use an immense amount of energy to secure the few inches a second that they make over ordinary swimmers."

"Did you take the plan of the swimplates from the turtle?" "Yes; the shake of the turtle is that of a swimming plate. It moves easily edgewise in the water, and has much vertical stability which enables it to make the up and down blow of his flippers very effective. When a turtle moves slowly, its action is like that of a frog on the diagonal; that is, it works the left front and the right rear flippers together; but when doing its best, the turtle works its flippers in pairs, which is found advantageous by human swimmers with plates."
